ABSTRACT

The Local Advisory Council (LAC) functions are being implemented in the government of Payu Village, Mootilango District, Gorontalo Regency by NOVALDI WANTU. The members are Sri Hantuti Paramata, S.E.M.Pd., and Dr. Srihandayani Suprapto, S.E.M.Si., who serves as the chairman.

The purpose of this study is to ascertain and evaluate how the Local Advisory Council (LAC) is carrying out its duties within the Gorontalo Regency's Payu Village, Mootilango District. This study uses a qualitative technique and is classified as descriptive research. Specifically, awareness factors, rule factors, discipline factors, organizational elements, and ability-skill variables, in line with Monir's thesis (2006: 2008). The Local Advisory Council (LAC) functions have not been implemented as optimally as they could be in the government of Payu Village, Motilango District, Gorontalo Regency, based on the results of the research and discussion previously presented. However, based on the indicator aspects of the awareness factor and discipline factor, things have been going well. The indicators of organizational factors, regulatory factors, and ability-skill factors, on the other hand, need to be further improved in order to carry out their functions.
