ABSTRACT

RANDA NUR GANI. Study of the Relationship Between Santri's Academic Resilience and Spiritual Intelligence at Madrasah Aliyah Al-Falah Islamic Boarding School, Gorontalo Regency. Rahmawaty Parman,., and Dr. Anik Indarwati,., Psychologist, served as members of the supervision team.

(1) A lack of knowledge regarding spiritual intelligence and academic resilience in Santri is the formulation of the research topic. (2) How students' spiritual intelligence affects their capacity to handle pressure and difficulties in the classroom. (3) Ignorance of how kids' academic success is impacted by the connection between spiritual intelligence and academic resilience. The purpose of this study is to ascertain whether pupils at the Al-Falah Islamic Boarding School have a relationship between spiritual intelligence and academic resilience. With 58 pupils in the research sample, the quantitative research design employed simple random sampling approaches. A Likert scale is used in the data collection process, and correlation analysis is used in the research methodologies. The research hypothesis test results, which were conducted on Madrasah Aliyah pupils at the Al-Falah Islamic Boarding School, Gorontalo Regency, indicated a correlation coefficient value of 0.758 (or 75.8%) in the category of "strong" and a significance value ($p = 0.000$, $p < 0.05$). Based on the study's findings, it can be said that among Madrasah Aliyah students at the Al-Falah Islamic Boarding School, there is a substantial correlation between spiritual intelligence and academic resilience.
